

GLOBAL HUMAN SCIENCES MINOR

Students can earn a Global Human Sciences Minor by completing a minimum of 15 credits (17 for those participating in International Student Teaching), including 6 credits of required core courses and between 9 and 11 credits selected from a designated list of courses offered by the departments and school in the College of Human Sciences. This minor is available to any undergraduate student at Iowa State University.

The Global Human Sciences Minor will contribute to students' ability to:

- Develop and demonstrate effective and professional oral and written communication skills regarding global human sciences
- Reflect on their experience with global human sciences and on how it has influenced their understanding of what it means to be a human scientist
- Analyze how social, cultural, technological, and economic contexts have affected the development of human sciences disciplines at home and abroad
- Identify and explain how issues of ethics, diversity, and social responsibility influence global human sciences
